WHITES\nTOWN WELCOMES WHICH WICH SAND\nWHICH SHOP
WHITESTOWN Location will be 6th in the State

For Immediate Release:
April 11th, 2016

WHITESTOWN, Ind. – You walk in, grab a bag and a pen, and customize your sandwich. It’s a formula that’s been extremely popular in the handful of Which Wich locations in central Indiana. Now the sandwich maker is expanding, opening its first location in the quickly growing northwest suburbs.

Which Wich’s new Whitestown location will be the sixth in Indiana. Which Wich is currently located in downtown Indianapolis, Carmel, Fishers, Noblesville and Bloomington. Although the franchise is new to Boone County, the man running it isn’t. Franchisee Lee Kleiner owns several Dairy Queen franchises, including the one in Zionsville.

Along with tasty sandwiches, the restaurant will bring help for Boone County’s hungry through Project PB&J. Launched in January 2014, Project PB&J donates Peanut Butter & Jelly sandwiches to local shelters to help feed children and adults in need. Since 2014, Project PB&J has distributed more than 170,000 PB&Js to the hungry.

Which Wich is just the latest in the growing number of new restaurants to choose to call Whitestown home. Also located in the Anson Development area of fast-growing Whitestown are: Chen’s Wok (opening soon), Pie Five Pizza, Buffalo Wild Wings, Gandolfo’s Deli, Flapjack’s, El Rodeo and McDonald’s. Dunkin Donuts is also coming soon and will be located in the retail center known as ‘Villages III’ currently under construction.
